

Contribution ID: 256

Type: Oral Presentation

Industrial Implementation of PyroLIBS for Continuous Hot Metal Chemistry Measurement

Wednesday 8 October 2025 18:10 (20 minutes)

The PyroLIBS system is a next generation technology for pyrometallurgy, capable of continuous and instant measurement of chemical compositions for molten materials. The present paper presents the early results of its first industrial implementation on a blast furnace runner, for continuous hot metal chemistry and temperature measurement.

Primary author: SHAHRIARI, Bijan (Hatch)

Co-authors: HALDAR, Achinta (Stelco); MOREAU, André (Hatch); LARAMÉE, Antoine (National Research Council of Canada); HYDE, Barry (Hatch); BROSSEAU, Charles (National Research Council of Canada); GRAY, Derek (Stelco); SOARES DE LIMA FILHO, Elton (National Research Council of Canada); D'ALESSIO, John (Stelco); SAB-SABI, Mohamad (National Research Council of Canada); BOUCHARD, Paul (National Research Council of Canada); DEDRICK, Scott (Stelco); RAY, Shamik (Stelco); DURAND, Shawn (Stelco); ACHARYA, Vaibhavkumar (Hatch)

Presenter: SHAHRIARI, Bijan (Hatch)

Session Classification: Direct Reduction & Alternative Ironmaking

Track Classification: CO2 mitigation in iron and steelmaking